JEFF McCARN'S TRIAL GOES OVER BECAUSE M'BRIDE IS IN HILO

The trial of Jeff McCarn, U. S. district attorney, on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon upon Claudius McBride, was postponed this morning to Monday or Tuesday.

The reason given for the postponement was that McBride, now in Hilo, was not served with a subpoena in time to be present this morning. It was stated he would be here Monday or Tuesday, Tuesday at the latest. On this showing Judge Monarrat of the district court allowed the case to stand over.

Speaking for McCarn, J. Lightfoot stated to the court that the former was anxious for his case to go to trial, and that he was perfectly agreeable to having it tried in the district court.

SIMPLE SUMMER FURNISHINGS

The house furnishings in summer should be as simple as possible—this not only for the sake of appearance but that the labor of caring for them may be lightened.

Summer is the time of outdoor life, and just as much of the outdoors should be brought into the house as can be. Members of a family whose house has a porch will spend many summer hours on it, and suitable porch furnishings will add much to their comfort. But the living rooms also may be given a summery air, an atmosphere of airiness. In fact, a few changes and touches will result in giving a reasonable atmosphere to the entire dwelling.

If there is space to store such articles of furniture as are not needed for the summer, a room will have a much more airy effect with the elimination for the time being of a chair or so, or perhaps a table. Perhaps the furniture put on the porch will provide all the change necessary in this respect. At any rate, heavy hangings should be taken down and packed away, lighter hangings, appropriate to the season, taking their place. It is not necessary to be anxious about the sunlight in summer, or at any time, for that matter. By all means free the rooms in summer of small articles that are not essential for use or ornament. There almost always is an accumulation of such in the winter season.

In the matter of porch furnishings, a word of warning should be spoken. There should not be too many of them, and on no account should they be of the fussy variety. Some people over-furnish their porches just as they do their houses. Simplicity should be the keynote here as elsewhere. A cluttered-up porch is even worse than a cluttered-up room, undesirable as the latter is, for a cluttered-up porch advertises the house unpleasantly, while a room is not open to more or less public inspection.

There is plenty of artistic porch furniture available at moderate prices and with a little care fitting selections may be made. Anything in the nature of bric-a-brac on the porch table is objectionable. If the table is provided with a cover, it is a wise precaution to have the cover weighted. This may be done by making a double hem around the edge and filling this with shot, or heavy weights, such as ballast for use for weighting coats and wraps, may be attached to each corner of the cover, on the under side and part way between the corners as well.

Excellent vases for porch use are those of the artistic green pottery. Get vases that stand securely; any vase that is in doubt about should have sand or shot put in it to weight it.

In the federal court this morning the trial of Cyrus C. Miller was continued before Judge Clemens and a jury. The defendant, who is charged with selling liquor at his rooming house, was put on the witness stand by his attorney, W. A. Miller, told a very plausible story of how he happened to have liquor on his premises when arrested.

The accused declared that some soldiers who had engaged rooms at his house, brought their own beer along with them and that his sales were commensurate in the rooming house. Miller also swore that he had used telephone orders for beer to back drivers and that the juries brought the necessary refreshments to the house. Assistant District Attorney Thompson cross-examined Miller, but when a question as to what certain women were doing at the rooming house was asked, he vigorously objected. The accused should be protected, declared A. B. and Judge Clemens read the law on the subject. This afternoon other witnesses from Lelehu are expected to appear and give evidence in behalf of Miller.

It will be noticed that no game is scheduled against the All-Chinese. This would undoubtedly be the best drawing card of the whole series, but the league and the team can't get together on the financial end of the deal. The proceeds of all games go to the league treasury, on the ground that the league is financing the stay-over of the Kelos, and putting up their guarantee of $500. The profits will be divided among the teams of the Oahu League at the end of the season. However, the Chinese figure that as the Oahu League season hasn't opened as yet, the club is a free agent, and Manager W. Tin Chong is holding out for his share of the profits of any game he plays, to go to the team direct. This led to a disagreement, and as the result every team is losing out. The best drawing card is cut off the schedule, the Kelos get less than they would otherwise, the league's percentage is cut down, and the Chinese get nothing at all. That is, it is unlikely that the Chinese will be declared in on the league melon if they "insurge" at the start, and refuse to do their share of the work.

LINDSAY WILL NOT TAKE HONORS FROM OFFICIAL

Insists Credit for Capture of Seattle Men Belongs to Captain McDuffie

R. J. Ritchie and A. Deputer, who were arrested here yesterday on information from Seattle, where they are wanted on charges of grand larceny, may return to face their prosecution without extradition. Captain of Detectives McDuffie, whose quick and clever work resulted in both arrests, is of the opinion that at least one of them, meaning Ritchie, is willing to return, waiving the "papers."

Referring to the account of these arrests published this morning, which makes Alexander Lindsay, Jr., the "hero of the tale," the latter said: "The statement in this morning's paper of the arrest of R. J. Ritchie and A. Deputer, alias Vanderveken, was due to the clever detective work of myself is hardly fair, in that it gives me credit which should have been given to Captain of Detectives McDuffie."

"The facts in the case are as follows: 'Acting under cabled instructions by the Detmer Woolen Company of Seattle, I filed a complaint against these parties and secured an attachment on their goods which had been shipped to Honolulu on the Honolulu. On Monday morning Chief of Detectives McDuffie showed me a cable from the chief of police of Seattle stating that a warrant had been issued for these two men for grand larceny, that they were passengers on the Niagara and requesting McDuffie to arrest and hold them pending extradition.'

"When I called at the office of Castle & Cooke, Ritchie, who it appears did not come on the Niagara but on the Sonoma, under the alias of J. Higgins, appeared with the bill of lading and claimed the goods. The appearance of Ritchie tallied with the description furnished by the chief of police at Seattle. I therefore saw McDuffie and told him my suspicions. A few hours later, McDuffie had the man at the police station and I identified him as the man I had seen at Castle & Cooke's. He admitted that he was Ritchie, and stated that Deputer was coming on the Niagara. On the arrival of the Niagara McDuffie boarded her and arrested Deputer."

In the matter of the bankruptcy of Olaf Omsted, Judge Clemens has handed down a decision that refers the whole affair to the referee in bankruptcy in Hilo. The question as to whether the trustees should be surcharged for the depreciation in value of certain assets of the bankrupt, consisting of 55 shares of capital stock of Olaf Sugar Company, held by the trustees for at least six years after the time they should have been sold, has been decided by the court retaining the accounts for consideration, and giving the usual notice to creditors. The intention is to refer the matter to the referee at Hilo.

During recent army maneuvers in the Philippines Sergeant Murphy with a patrol, keen for getting back to camp and supper, came to a bridge over a mountain torrent, with the placard "Destroyed." Much averse to a long detour, the sergeant did a little reconnoitering, and finding the coast apparently clear, led his men to the bridge. Halfway they were caught by a rattlesnake officer. "Hi! can't you see that this bridge is supposed to be destroyed?" "Sure I do sir," answered Murphy, "but this detachment is supposed to be swimming." And the message was safely effected.—Springfield Republican.
